KEEP MY MIND FREE FROM THE RECITAL OF END-

SEAL MY LIPS WHEN I AM INCLINED TO TELL OF MY

TEACH ME THE GLORIOUS LESSON, THAT OCCASION-

INTELLIGENCE
RESEARCH TECHNIQUES

Dates: 13 September - 8 October 1965
The class meets from 0900 to 1230 at 1000 Glebe, but on occasion visits Agency facilities and services in other buildings.

This course is intended for research analysts who are new to intelligence research and for those who have to keep up with changes in the Intelligence Community and with improvements in the support available to analysts. Research analysts from the DDI, DDP, and DDS&T usually take the course, but it is also valuable to librarians, linguists who exploit foreign language publications, document disseminators, requirements officers, and others who support intelligence research.

A text prepared especially for this course is used for background reading and the student may keep his copy as a desk reference. Each student is required to bring a research project to class, which is approved by his supervisor, on which he works during the course. The course is organized so that the student can carry his project through all of the major steps in the research process; that is, research planning, the use of libraries and other repositories of information, assembly of data from the in-box, the use of collection programs, the analytical process, and intelligence writing and briefing techniques for disseminating finished intelligence.

25X1A

For additional information on the course, call [REDACTED] Intelligence Production Faculty, extension 2452, or call AIB/RS, extension 2365.

ORIENTATIONS FOR

UNIV. OF OKLAHOMA'S
PROGRAMS FOR SELF-
DEVELOPMENT

UNDERGRADUATE AND GRADUATE DEGREES
FOR PERSONS EMPLOYED FULL TIME:

The University of Oklahoma, Norman, Oklahoma, has two programs whereby persons who are employed full time can obtain degrees by combining independent study with a short period of intensive resident instruction.

The School of Continuing Education offers the Bachelor of Liberal Studies Development Program, which breaks sharply with traditional residence credit-hour programs. The student proceeds at his own pace in a program of independent study with the assistance of a team of faculty advisers. He has flexibility in the sequence with which he prepares in three areas -- humanities, social sciences, and natural sciences. Adults with unusually rich experience and prior learning may complete the BLS in two years or less. The high school graduate should anticipate spending at least four to six years in the program. An excellent rate of progress is the completion of independent study in an area each year followed by the area seminar which is offered during the summer. Following his placement tests, the BLS applicant may complete Orientation, Advisement and Enrollment during week-end conferences scheduled for this purpose three to four times a year. Applicants who are not able to go to the University for completion of placement tests may request a copy of "The Off-Campus Procedures for Placement Testing, Orientation, Advisement, and Enrollment."

An Advanced Program in Governmental Studies was announced in early April 1965. The program offers a Master of Arts in Public Administration which may be earned by combining independent study and preparation with a six-day period of resident instruction. The curriculum gives the student an opportunity to concentrate study in one of eight areas - Political Thought and Behavior, American Government and Politics, International Relations, Urban Development and Public Policy, Social Welfare Studies, Science and Public Policy, Business and Economic Activities, and National Strength and Security.

SPEEDING THE PARTING GUEST

If you want to be accessible to office callers, yet chary of your time, here are some tips for speeding up visits:

- Keep a desk memo, and schedule all appointments consecutively. This not only organizes your day more efficiently, but has the psychological effect of speeding up visits when visitors see other waiting.
- Schedule a long talker's visit just before a conference or other important event to give yourself a valid reason for terminating the interview.
- Periodically review the record of visits on your desk memo to see if certain kinds of visits take too much time and should be cut down.
- When possible, take notes while the caller is talking so he knows you are getting his story, and then steer him politely on to another person in the firm to handle the details. Drop in briefly to see that all is well and to assure the visitor that he is getting your personal attention.
